From the D. C. Bhitalnagar, letter no. 435 of 8-3-16

States that the practice of sacrificing animals during the yatra has been in vogue for a long time and the public opinion of the members of the institution would be and is decidedly against any curtailment of the usual practice.

The Dy. Commr reports that, though he could not directly prevent the animal sacrifice in question, he has taken ^{the following} ~~some~~ indirect steps in the matter calculated to minimize the cruelty.

- (1) Execution of certain sanitary improvements in the locality so as to facilitate the cleansing up of the place after the sacrifice -
- (2) The levy of a small fee on behalf of the temple to be used for the further improvement of the temple and its surroundings -

The Dy. Commr thinks that in course of time it may be possible to limit the number of animals sacrificed and to take over to the temple the other animals offered in a live state and sell them by auction or otherwise and utilize the realizations for the benefit of the temple.
